

Utah | Stacey Bank, MD

Executive Medical Director

Utah Department of Health and Human Services

Dr. Stacey Bank has been appointed as the new executive medical director for DHHS, effective November 4, 2024.

Dr. Bank, MD, is a board-certified family physician with over 20 years of experience. She has a strong background in primary care and a deep commitment to serving diverse populations. As a skilled physician leader, Dr. Bank brings a wealth of leadership expertise to her role, driven by a dedication to improving health outcomes for all Utahns. From 2022-2024, she served on the Salt Lake County Board of Health.

Dr. Bank was most recently a physician lead at Sacred Circle Healthcare and before that was the medical director at the University of Utah Intensive Outpatient Clinic. Born and raised in Salt Lake City, Dr. Bank completed her undergraduate studies at the University of Utah and earned her medical degree from Georgetown University School of Medicine. Throughout her career, she has consistently championed healthcare access, focusing on the needs of vulnerable populations and addressing disparities in healthcare delivery.

In her new role, Dr. Bank is excited to engage in community outreach across the state, assess the health needs of Utah's diverse communities, and advocate for all populations. Her goal is to foster collaboration, improve health and wellness, and strengthen the public health infrastructure across Utah.
