

Ex-officio:Chair, Senior Deputies Committee

Tracy Dolan, MS

Deputy Commissioner of Public Health
Vermont Department of Health

Tracy Dolan, MS is Vermont's Deputy Commissioner of Public Health. She has been working in public health for 20 years, getting her start in northern Canada working with vulnerable populations in reducing the risk of HIV infection. She spent 10 years working in international health, primarily in sub-Saharan Africa with a focus on HIV/AIDS care and prevention, maternal child health, and youth reproductive health.

At the Department of Health, Tracy provides leadership and strategic thinking to public health programs and investments. She builds partnerships across state government and is the project sponsor for several major state initiatives with public health. Tracy has led the development of a strong public health performance management system and champions upstream investments in public health. She holds a Master of Science in Community Health.
