

MONTANA

Gregory S Holzman, MD, MPH

State Medical Officer

Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services

Prior to joining Montana's Department of Public Health and Human Services full time, Dr. Holzman was the Director of the Healthy Campus Initiative at Michigan State University (MSU). Dr. Holzman also saw patient's with the College of Human Medicine's Family Medicine Department and worked as the Associate Chair of Preventive Medicine within the Family Medicine Department.

Prior to MSU, Dr. Holzman served as deputy director of the Office for State, Tribal, Local and Territorial Support at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Prior to that, he was the chief medical executive for the Michigan Department of Community Health.

During his career, he has worked on various public health and health-related policy issues from smoke-free legislation to funding for a state-wide trauma system. He has special interests in social determinants of health, health promotion and disease prevention, elimination of health disparities and building better integration between clinical medicine, public health, and community-based organizations.

Dr. Holzman is board certified in both family medicine and preventive medicine. A graduate of the University of Florida's College of Medicine, he completed his family medicine residency at Carolinas Medical Center in Charlotte, North Carolina, and his preventive medicine residency at the University of Washington in Seattle, Washington. He worked in residency education and clinical medicine at the Central Maine Medical Center's Family Practice Residency Program. He has also been involved with medical education, clinical care and research as an associate professor in the departments of Community Medicine and Family Medicine at the University of North Dakota's School of Medicine and Health Sciences. Before completing his second residency in preventive medicine, he worked on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in Browning, Montana.

