Emergency Contraception after Sexual Assault: Five Key Facts for Survivors

Hospital emergency departments (EDs) in Massachusetts must offer emergency contraception (EC) and this medically and factually accurate information to female sexual assault survivors whether or not they have filed a police report or completed a rape examination kit. If EC pills were not provided at your ED visit today, please see the next page for help.

1. Birth control methods that can help prevent pregnancy after sexual assault, rape, or unprotected sex are called Emergency Contraception (EC).
   - Using EC pills or getting an emergency copper IUD (intra-uterine device) inserted as soon as possible after an assault can greatly lower your chances of getting pregnant.
   - Both methods of EC are effective up to 5 days (120 hours) after sexual assault or rape. EC pills are sometimes called “the morning after-pill,” but it’s best to take EC as soon as possible.

2. EC is safe and effective.
   - Millions of women have safely used EC to prevent unintended pregnancies for over 30 years.
   - Some women also learn how to use daily birth control pills as EC. Learn more at www.mariatalks.com/ec-birth-control-pills.

3. EC pills work by keeping an egg from leaving the ovary.
   - Just like daily birth control pills, EC pills may also keep the sperm from meeting the egg. However, it cannot stop a fertilized egg from attaching to the lining of the uterus.
   - EC is not the abortion pill and will not end an existing pregnancy or cause an abortion or miscarriage.

   Ask your doctor if emergency IUD insertion within 5 days (the most effective type of EC) is also right for you. The IUD is a small copper and plastic device that a provider can place inside a woman’s uterus to prevent pregnancy. IUDs are 99.9% effective as EC and can provide ongoing birth control for as long as needed (up to 10 years). The IUD has recently been recommended as the best EC choice for women who are considered obese for their weight and height, however women at any weight have the right to access EC pills in the ED today.

4. There are two types of EC pills that are FDA approved for use.
   - ella® (ulipristal acetate) is the most highly effective EC pill available to help prevent pregnancy for the first 5 days after sexual assault or rape. ella®:
     - prevents more pregnancies than progestin-only pills, especially in women who:
       - weigh more than 165 pounds, or
       - have recently had or will have a period within two weeks, or
       - were unable to get EC until 3-5 days (72-120 hours) after the assault.
     - might make hormonal birth control methods (like the pill, ring, or patch) less effective right after taking it. As with all EC, a back-up birth control method (like a condom) should be used if possible until your next period starts.

   ella® was FDA approved in 2010. More research is needed to learn if pregnant and breastfeeding women can safely use ella®. Before choosing ella®, you may want to take a pregnancy test to find out if you were already pregnant before the assault.

   Plan B One-Step® and lower cost generic (progestin-only) pills reduce the risk of pregnancy by 88%. Progestin-only pills:
   - work best to prevent pregnancy for the first 3 days after sexual assault or rape but may still help to reduce the risk of pregnancy on the 4th or 5th day
   - may not work as well if you weigh over 165 pounds and may not work well at all if you weigh over 175 pounds.

   Research shows that progestin-only pills do not cause birth defects, and can be safely used by breastfeeding women. If you find out later that you were pregnant when you took this type of EC, it will not harm you or your pregnancy. It will not affect your ability to become pregnant in the future.
After taking EC pills, some women may experience mild, short-term side effects.

- You may have more or less bleeding than normal with your next period. Your next period may start earlier or later than normal. If your period is more than 1 week late, you may be pregnant, and should take a pregnancy test.
- You may experience nausea, stomach pain, headache, fatigue and dizziness, similar to the side effects of daily birth control pills. If you have severe, long-lasting stomach pain after taking EC pills, call your doctor right away.
- Your doctor can give you medication to help prevent nausea. If you vomit within 2-3 hours of taking a dose of EC pills, call your doctor to see if you need to take another dose.
- After taking EC pills, it is highly recommended to use a back-up birth control method if possible, such as a condom, until your next period starts.

The doctor or nurse can answer any questions you may have about EC.

Don’t Wait!

Take EC as soon as possible to prevent pregnancy after sexual assault.

---

Still need help getting low-cost Emergency Contraception (EC) or other confidential support services?

- Call a Rape Crisis Center at 1-800-841-8371 (English) or 1-800-223-5001 (Español), or visit www.surviverape.org
- Call the MDPH Family Planning Program at 1-617-624-6060 or visit www.mariatalks.com/find-services

If you want EC right away, visit a clinic or pharmacy or search online for the pills by name.

- ella® is available with a prescription from a doctor. You can also order ella® for next day shipment at a low cost from: www.ella-kwikmed.com
- Plan B One-Step® can be sold to anyone of any age at most pharmacies. Pharmacies can also sell low-cost progestin-only pills (generics) without a prescription.
- Some Massachusetts pharmacists are trained to dispense EC to all women, including those under the age of 17 or who do not have a valid ID, without a prescription. Find one at www.mariatalks.com/ec-pharmacies

---

Remember: hospitals with Emergency Departments are required by law to offer EC to women seeking care after a sexual assault, whether or not a woman completes a rape examination kit or reports the assault to the police. If the ED doctor does not think that it is safe for you to take EC, you can ask why. A medically and factually accurate reason must be documented in your medical record.

If EC was not offered at your ED visit today, or you were told that you needed to complete a police report or rape examination kit first, you can file a formal complaint by calling the MDPH Division of Health Care Quality at 1-800-462-5540